TGIM WEEKLY AUDIO: Seeing What Isn't There

Transcription*

Thank God It's Monday!® People aren't hired because they can do the job. Most who didn't get the job could've fulfilled the job description easily. The people who are hired are those who demonstrate the ability to see what isn't there, and should be, and make it happen. Now, that's job security.

Saying something like, "nobody told me" or "it's not in my job description" is a first class ticket to the unemployment line. Instead, if you see something that needs to be done, don't put a note in the suggestion box—step up and make it happen. Think like a leader. Leadership is not a position; it's a way of being.

Develop a reputation for seeing what isn't there and making it happen and you'll be amazed at all the doors swinging open for you.

Have a great Monday!
